

LABOUR BOTCH THE ECONOMY

The pound is up and the warnings for Britain's economy are dire. Why should this be? A strong currency is usually a sign of economic success after all. Germany's Deutschemark, Japan's Yen and the US dollar have all been strong 'hard currencies' while their economies have performed well. Why is it that only when Britain's currency strengthens it means bad news?

The answer, as said in BN many times before is that our economy is so lopsided. Britain exports three-quarters of its own manufactures and imports four-fifths of its own needs. Britain gets the worst of all possible worlds: economic downturns abroad affect the country badly as does a higher exchange rate since British goods exported become dearer and hence fail to sell — damaging our economy once, and imports coming in become even cheaper thus damaging our economy a second time.

In the General Election, the BNP argued that only a progressive ban on foreign imports and the rebuilding of our manufacturing base offered any long term economic salvation for Britain and the British. It simply isn't possible to have a nation entirely engaged in the service sector — staffing shops, cleaning windows and offering consultancies. Someone has got to be engaged in making something of value, in creating real wealth. Labour, like the Tories, are committed to the international system of unfair free trade and 'economic globalisation' where Britons cannot compete with wage rates $\frac{1}{4}$ that of workers in the Far East. Nothing will be done about the continued deindustrialisation which has turned Britain from economic superpower to pauper state in just a few decades.

Last month, two more of Britain's pits closed: Ashfordby in Leicestershire owned by RJB mining which extracted deep-mined coal and South Crofty near Cambourne in Cornwall which mined tin (South Crofty may or may not get a reprieve. If it does, it will not be for long). In both cases economic considerations dictated the closures because foreign imports could be had cheaper. However, if Britain followed that line of argument no one would have a job at all since everything can be had cheaper produced by exploited foreign labour.

The fact is that, if used, Britain has coal reserves to last for another 300 years making the country strategically independent for its fuel. Instead, mines have been closed down and allowed to flood and go to waste.

That is rather like the tale of Britain's workforce as highly skilled, highly paid jobs in engineering and manufacturing are phased out in favour of the service economy's shelf stacker and pizza flipping jobs for a minimal wage. Last year 825,000 were made redundant. Most found their way back into employment but on lower incomes.

Last month another interest rate rise, which made the fourth rate rise since the election, put the bite on industry and mortgage payers alike. Many are now regretting their decision to vote Labour in May, not that the Tories were any better!

Telewest, Britain's second largest cable group have just axed 1,400 jobs — a quarter of its workforce, while Royal Doulton have cynically lied to and betrayed their workers in the Potteries. In late July, Doulton announced that they are to open another factory in Indonesia by the end of the year. Royal Doulton has opened factories in the Far East before to take advantage of cheaper labour costs and each time has assured workers that their jobs are safe, since their Far East factories would only supply the Far East, Australia and the US. Company Director Ann Linscott said: "It will be a benefit to the business in Stoke because the profits will be ploughed back in." Four days later, Doulton announced the loss of 330 jobs at its potteries in Stoke! A day after that it was revealed that Indonesian made Royal Doulton is being sold all over the UK including Staffs! Despite the lies of Doulton's bosses, workers in the Potteries know that their jobs have been taken away by workers in Indonesia. One worker said: "We have been working to train staff to operate the Indonesian factory for 12 months. Now that has been done they have taken our jobs. We have dug our own graves." Alan Coxon, a glazier for 18 years said: "At my age there is no chance of getting another job, that's it."

When politicians talk of the New World Order and the global economy, this is what they mean: Britons fired, foreigners hired. It means a continuing drive towards deindustrialisation and a general lowering of wages towards the world's average. Bluntly, Britain and the British are going to get a lot poorer yet.

DEVOLUTION

The vote this month in Scotland and Wales for separate assemblies — in Scotland for a separate Parliament with a separate vote on tax raising powers and in Wales on a separate assembly is one which may see the start of the break-up of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, or it may not.

Labour believe it will not and point to the fully federal states of the USA and Germany as examples. Labour is supporting a 'Yes' vote in Wales and a 'Yes, Yes' vote in Scotland.

In Wales and Scotland, Plaid Cymru and the SNP are also supporting the 'Yes' campaigns in the belief that it will herald a break-up. Not that either the SNP or the Plaid represent real nationalism as evidenced by their embrace of coloured immigration to 'benefit' both the Scots (and Welsh) people and their culture. The truth is that both the Plaid and the SNP are simply anti-English chauvinists in their rejection of rule by Westminster, some 150-350 miles distant. How much better they say to be ruled from Brussels — another 200 miles and a sea more distant again!

The BNP opposes the separate assemblies, not because the party doesn't think that local people shouldn't have a bigger say at a local level. The party does, and this principle goes all the way down to council level. No, the BNP opposes the assemblies because, given current political trends, the Plaid and the SNP may be right and the UK may end up by breaking up. Such a development would please the EU since smaller countries would be weaker and would be all the more easily manipulated into a single Euro government, and all the more easily bullied into accepting any Euro diktat that the EU felt pleased to hand down.

Together, the four nations of England, Scotland, Wales and Ulster have achieved much and potentially can do so again. A mighty Empire, great art and culture, the industrial revolution and the wealth of British inventive genius make the British contribution to history second to none. Individually, they amount to much less.

A divided UK would separate kinsfolk, would separate our very people who are all of the same racial stock, share the same historical experiences, language, culture and civilisation. Just who would benefit from a weaker England, Scotland, Wales and Ulster? Not the British — wherever they live.

LABOUR TO END THE

The Tories started it and Labour are to finish it. The Welfare State is to end and the party that started it will end it. When William Beveridge ushered in an era of social decency he said: "The main feature of the Plan for Social Security is a scheme of social insurance against interruption and destruction of earning power and for special expenditure arising at marriage, birth and death."

In an era of rising prosperity and full employment that was, and still is, a perfectly reasonable commitment. But the shift of investment and of industry to the Far East and along with it the loss of British jobs along with the arrival of millions of economic migrants has made the present welfare state untenable.

There is a choice of course: Run down the social safety net to that which can be afforded according to current political and economic trends; Or rebuild British industry, halt foreign imports, stop immigration and reaffirm the principles made by Beveridge all those years ago.

None of the establishment parties will back the latter course, not even Labour which founded the welfare state. The system which eliminated the poor law and provided a safety net against unemployment, old age and ill health is in retreat. The Tories began by freezing children's allowances, breaking the link between pensions and earnings, and they began the dismantling of the NHS. All the time of course, crocodile tears were shed along with mealy mouthed assurances that "the NHS is safe in our hands."

While the Tories began the attack, only Labour will be able to deliver the death blow to the social safety net since if the Tories did it, the outcry would bring down a Tory government. Labour, on the other hand, seen as the 'friend' of the Beveridge legacy will be able to get away with the murder of pensions and the NHS in the same way that the previous Tory government got away with devastating defence cuts and rocketing immigration.

Chancellor Gordon Brown gave notice before the election that: "Our pledges are not commitments." As part of that, pensioners will now have to pay for their doctor's prescriptions and 'Tory' Blair has signalled the likelihood of charges to even see a doctor. With the end of tax relief on private health insurance for the over-60s, some 100,000 are likely to revert back to the NHS to place the service under even more strain than it has been. The increase in the number of immigrants with AIDS continues unabated as does the numbers of Europeans (up to 350 last month) flocking to Britain to receive expensive drug treatment therapy costing up to £10,000 per year per person. With a £3½ million drug bill for Europeans and more than that for newly arrived immigrants and our own home grown AIDS cases, the cost on the NHS of these people with their expensive therapy threatens further the medical treatment of native Britons which can usually be treated quickly and at far less cost. Our own folk are placed on lengthy waiting lists often in pain because of a 'shortage of cash'. Yet, apparently, hundreds of AIDS cases are treated at massive cost.

Why should our old folk have to go short and be denied NHS treatment because of free-loading foreigners?

Earlier this year, BN reported upon the scandal of the return of rickets in schoolchildren. Free school milk was ended by the Tories and the result is a decline in health. What are Labour going to do about it? The answer is nothing. Likewise tuberculosis has returned, mainly through the arrival of infected immigrants. What are Labour going to do about it? Again, the answer is nothing. Will medical checks be made at airports on newly arrived immigrants? No chance!

Labour will keep none of their promises. During the election, Labour captured two of Barnet's three seats by promising a 'review' of Edgware Hospital's Accident and

The Flame That Never Dies

In every British heart, there burns immortal flames,
A pride that never wavers, a valour yet untamed,
The enemies of Britain won't cease to wonder why,
They can never beat —
THE FLAME THAT NEVER DIES.

In the depths of English countryside,
there's something in the air,
A pride filled sense of history, of battle uncompar'd,
A love of life, a rural charm besets the land's blue skies,
And none can ever dampen —
THE FLAME THAT NEVER DIES.

On the sides of Scotland's mountains, the feeling's all around,
The stirring skirl of pipers, none can beat the sound,
The heather on the lochside, the streams ne'er run dry,
They can try, but they can't tame —
THE FLAME THAT NEVER DIES.

On the streets of Ulster, the flag is always seen,
A sign of distant victories, and more that yet shall be,
To stay as part of Britain, many heroes died,
No enemy could ever smash —
THE FLAME THAT NEVER DIES.

The Welshman in his country, a language of his own,
There's strength in British union, ensuring safer homes,
Diversity and culture, the British people's pride,
Together we will stand and fuel —
THE FLAME THAT NEVER DIES.

They can kill the British people, and try to drag us down,
They can jail us on false charges, repression all around,
But as British men, we will not bend, our Union Jacks we'll fly,
Again they've tried and failed to kill —
THE FLAME THAT NEVER DIES.

MURDERED BY THE MEDIA

The hyenas of the mass media have claimed their highest-profile victim to date; Diana, Princess of Wales was killed by the pack of press photographers which chased her into that tunnel wall in Paris as surely as if they had shot or stabbed her. Most revoltingly of all, instead of helping the badly injured victims: Diana and bodyguard Trevor Rees-Jones, the paparazzi swarmed all over the vehicle, like vultures, taking photos from every angle.

British Nationalist is not going to join in the eulogising of the dead Princess — there is nothing we can add to what has already been said. She was not perfect, however, and like most of today's Royal Family she was an arch-liberal. Liberal or not, her death was a terrible tragedy, and it was not an accident. Diana was, quite literally, driven to death by the media.

Public concern over the way in which gangs of reporters, photographers and TV film crews hound those in the public eye has, quite rightly, been growing in recent years. Members of the Royal Family, politicians, sporting heroes and, most disgraceful of all, the victims or relatives of victims of tragedies, are endlessly chased, badgered for interviews, spied upon, lied about and secretly photographed. The media hyenas are out of control; they have already driven others to suicide, Diana is only their biggest and most dramatic trophy.

The tragedy in Paris has brought fresh urgency and relevance to the BNP's demands for the reform of the media. It confirms that the BNP was right to go into the recent general election with a manifesto containing the most comprehensive proposals on this vital subject of any party.

It isn't just a matter of protecting individuals from unjustifiable harassment at times of private joy or grief. The concentration of enormous power to mould public opinion in the grip of a handful of media moguls — often of foreign origin and with questionable loyalty to Britain and her institutions and traditions has been the biggest single factor in the decay of British freedoms and the undermining of true democracy. It is in order to undo this deadly damage to the body politic — as well as to protect other individuals from the vicious attentions of the media hyenas — that the BNP now redoubles its call for sweeping reforms to democratise the media and to restore the rights of individuals and the nation as a whole. The urgent, all-round changes we demand are:

THE RIGHT TO PRIVACY
There must be a legally enforceable right to privacy guaranteed to every law-abiding citizen, regardless of status.

THE RIGHT TO REPLY

There must be a legally enforceable right of reply. Any individual, group or political organisation subjected to attacks by the media which include lies, distortions or errors of fact, must be given, free, equal and equally prominent space or airtime in which to reply.

BREAK THE MEDIA MONOPOLY

No individual, consortium or special interest group should be permitted to own more than one major newspaper or TV or radio channel. The present undemocratic and dangerous concentration of power and influence must be broken up.

NO FOREIGN INFLUENCE ON BRITAIN'S MEDIA

It is intolerable that foreign companies, or individuals whose political and ethnic loyalties do not lie with Britain, should own sections of the media and thereby have massive covert influence on the news we hear, the facts we see and the issues we discuss. Only British citizens without foreign loyalties should be able to own stakes in Britain's media.

MAKE LIBEL ACTIONS AFFORDABLE

The present situation, whereby only

Diana and the press pack

the super-rich can afford to bring actions for libel against big newspapers is a disgrace. Libel laws must be updated and legal aid be made available for such actions. Justice must be available to all, not just the rich. Organisations, including political parties, should be able to sue for libel if they are lied about.

WELFARE STATE

Emergency Unit. That promise has already been cynically and blatantly broken. The Advertiser described Labour's words made at the time as 'not worth the paper they were printed on.' The continued destruction of the NHS is assured in Labour's hands!

The chaos within the NHS is likely to continue, apart from anything else, because Health Secretary Frank Dobson is all at sea in his new post.

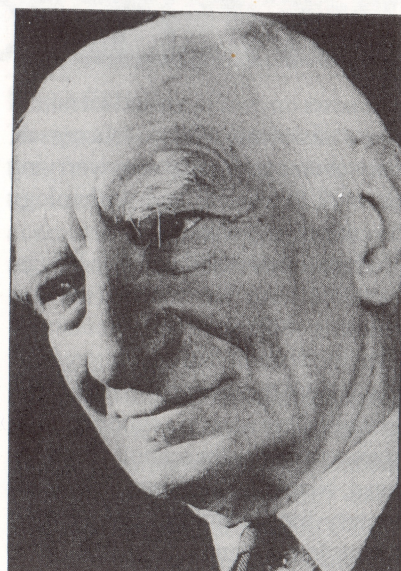

Dobson has told nurses that local pay bargaining would end with pay being negotiated separately. Later he told managers that local pay arrangements, already in place, can stay. The lack of firm grip and the smell of incompetence abounds. He then met with Trust board directors and told them they are doing "a great job", yet when he addressed a Unison conference he said that 900 non-executive Tory place men would be swept away from the Trust boards.

Labour have announced that the cash strapped NHS can have £1,200 million to see it through until next Spring. Such a massive sum of money looks at first glance to be easily sufficient. Even so, it must be remembered that the NHS is still the biggest employer in Western Europe and that the NHS costs £100 million per day to run. It is for this reason that Labour's much publicised emergency cash injection is not good enough. That money represents just 12 days running costs! And that money from next year's funding has already been spent! What happens next year?

The strain will grow since NHS waiting lists are now up to 1.2 million, an increase of 136,500 since the beginning of the year. Those waiting for more than a year stand at 47,000. Health Authorities are warning of another fraught winter as money runs out, and this is after the £1,200 million cash advance made already! Certainly some of this is down to the Tories, but since Labour are following the Tory agenda and refuse to inject the resources necessary to change things, they must take full responsibility. As Lib-Dem health spokesman Evan Harris put it: "Labour cannot blame the Tory NHS spending record for the state of waiting lists while at the same time adopting Tory spending plans." Quite.

On pensions, Labour have out-Toried the Tories in the devastation they are bringing to retirement savings. A disastrous budget for pensions means that the whole future of British pensions is in doubt. The Tories told people to opt out of the state system and 4 million have seen their pensions become worthless as a result, and 15 million who have

WILLIAM BEVERIDGE:
Father of the welfare state opted out are now being left behind by the state scheme Serps. And for pensioners now, their situation is dire. Since the Tories broke the earnings related link in 1980, single pensioners are now £20 per week worse off and couples £30 per week worse off. Many hoped that Labour might reinstate the deficit. Not a hope! Will they reinstate the earnings related link so that pensions don't fall even further behind? Deliberate leaks suggest that this is possible, but what is given with one hand will surely be taken away with the other, and the already pitiful Christmas bonus will go — maybe just in time for this Christmas! 'Tory' Blair and Harriet Harman could play a Scrooge double act, but clever Tony will almost certainly ensure that Harman will carry the can for it.

In education too it has become apparent that Labour will not deliver. During the election, Labour promised class sizes would be reduced to under 30. After the election Labour revealed that this only applied to 5-7 year-olds! Education Secretary David Blunkett has also undermined further education by announcing £1,000 annual tuition fees for those in higher education and in doing so has "kicked away the ladder of opportunity" for many from low income families. Tory MPs cheered this news as it was announced in Parliament. Needless to say, all these uncaring politicians who went through higher education themselves didn't pay a penny!

THREE weeks ago Labour captured two of Barnet's three Parliamentary seats on the back of a cast-iron pledge to review the closure of Edgware Hospital's accident and emergency unit. This week, now in government, Labour reneged on that promise.

It announced a review of the community facilities which would be sited at Edgware, but stated categorically that it would not re-visit the decision to shut the A&E unit.

New Health Minister Alan Milburn said: "I cannot turn the clock back to change decisions previously taken. The transfer of services has gone too far for that." Yet Chris Smith, who was Shadow Health Secretary before the General Election, had pledged a review of the decision to close Barnet, writing: "If the review concludes that an A&E department is needed at Edgware, then we will of course wish to implement the conclusions of the review."

This week it became clear that those words were not worth the paper they were written on.

THE TED BUDDEN COLUMN

QUEERS IN THE COMMONS

I'm not in favour of queer bashing; never have been. There always have been homosexuals and no doubt there always will be. As long as they were discreet and stayed in the closet I've always been happy to pretend that they don't exist.

Now of course, they are well and truly out of the closet; not only out of the closet but flaunting their perversion and becoming daily more clamorous and demanding. We now have Gay Time TV on the BBC and adverts for the queer dating agency Gay Exchange on ITV, not to mention the wall-to-wall queerism on Channel 4. Why they'll soon have to adapt the royal coat of arms to include a queer rampant!

Of course, all decaying civilisations have gone the same way. During Rome's decline, homosexuality and bisexuality were both commonplace and acceptable. Abortion was the norm among Roman women. Aliens thronged the streets and anyone could become a Roman. Then the fierce tribes swept down from the North and destroyed a Rome that was no longer capable of defending itself. One does not need to be very perceptive to see the similarities with our own decadent Western civilisation.

So as all the media strain every nerve to make homosexuality seem as normal as Mom and apple pie, Parliament too is determined to assert that it is really just another kind of normality that ordinary people, now known as homophobes, do not understand. For the quest to reduce the age of homosexual consent to 16 is once again a Parliamentary priority. It will almost certainly become law.

It is argued by those in favour that since the age of sexual consent for girls is 16 then the age of homosexual consent for boys should also be 16; all in the cause of equality. This conveniently overlooks the fact that girls mature much earlier than boys. A girl of 14 is a young woman; a daft young woman it's true but a woman nevertheless, shielded for 2 years. For a great many boys, the early teens are often a time of sexual ambivalence and confusion which makes them prime targets for perverts.

So we may expect that the massed ranks of queers on the commons benches, open and closet-cases alike, will be voting in favour. Tony Blair will be in favour, as he was last time, since his good lady, the famed lesbians' lawyer, will insist upon it. So too will William Hague, the follicle-challenged Tory leader, just as he was last time. Mark you, I've always had my suspicions of Hague. It is true that he has recently become engaged to a young lady and, contrary to Tory family values, insists on shacking up with her in hotel rooms in the most public fashion. One must suppose that this presumed fornication is because his red corpuscles are dancing a fandango but one must also wonder why, in these circumstance, he doesn't rush the girl to the altar straight away instead of insisting on a prolonged 'engagement'. Can it be simply for the sake of appearances?

So it seems that the 'Bugging Little Boys' Bill will breeze through Parliament and no doubt a great many queers, both inside and outside the House, will be licking their lips in keen anticipation at this influx of new talent. Some are born queer; some become queer; and others have queerness thrust upon them as in this case. Our rulers are determined to make perversion all-pervasive.

BATTLE FOR FREE SPEECH, LIBERTY AND FREEDOM

The news on civil liberties last month was a mixed one with two successes, one reverse and with very worrying news of the use of high technology to control populations.

The good news is that Sarah Briggs, expelled from her school (see last month's BN) has been reinstated over the head of the headmistress by the school governors. Sarah, who criticised her school's shortcomings, was expelled by the school's Stalinite head, Nicola Atkin. This is a definite victory for freedom of speech over an intolerant wannabe Pol Pot. There is still no news of disciplinary action against the Stalinite Atkin.

SARAH BRIGGS:
No apology to Stalinite head

● Another victory for freedom came with news that a 'white-rock' music concert has gone ahead in the teeth of the most strenuous efforts by the enemies of freedom to stop it. From the moment of announcing their concert, Stalinists made a concerted attempt to cancel the concert. Enemies of freedom who attempted to stop the concert included Labour Euro-MP Glenys Kinnock, MP Peter Hain as well as anti-British hate magazine, Suchshite. They prevailed upon the police to carry out overt political harassment. The police have exceeded their authority in a politically partisan way to try to deny young 'white-rock' music fans their concert. Since giving a music concert is not a crime, the deployment of the entire South Wales Special Branch (Britain's political police force) collaborating with eleven other police forces to try to locate the location of the South Wales concert and get a stop put to it, without even asking the permission of the Home Secretary is a criminal act by the police themselves.

In a desperate attempt to make investigative headway, police mounted a brutal dawn raid (no crime had been committed!) on the home of Celtic Warrior lead singer, Billy Bartlett. Fifty stormtroopers in riot gear smashed down Billy's front door and put several windows through in an act of pure intimidation without regard for the safety of either himself, his wife or two young daughters. Police jackboots scrunched the broken glass all over the house. So oppressive were police that local people have been shocked and angered to find that 'their' police force are no better than a banana republic paramilitary.

BN wants to know who gave authority for the expenditure of thousands of pounds of tax-payers money? Whoever it was should be investigated for an abuse of police power and possible illegal allocation of funds. The National Audit Office should make the culprit personally responsible for all expenditures. Why after all should local tax-payers have to bear the burden of financing a single rogue officer's repressive illegalities?

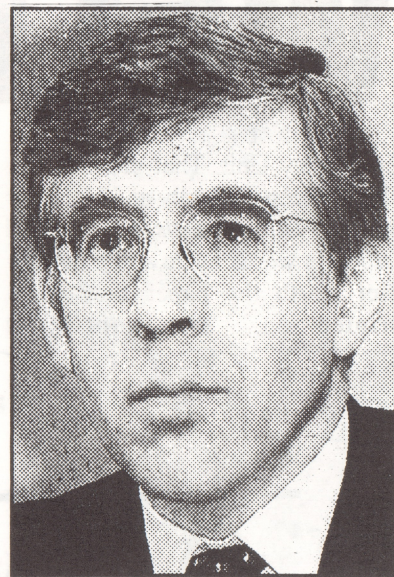

In the event, a mobile telephone 'tree' enabled concert goers to get to the event which was hastily relocated to Coventry. Three-hundred concert goers turned up with no police presence whereupon the concert went ahead with no hint of trouble all night.

Readers can see photographs of the damage wrought by Labour's new stormtroopers on the Internet at: <http://www.intersite.co.uk/highlander/>

● Police chiefs have instituted a system of population control whereby they can stop the outgoing calls of millions leaving 'important' phones able to function. The whole telephone network is affected including mobile networks. Allegedly for use in war time in the event of a nuclear strike, police have cut lines on many occasions — during IRA bomb alerts, riots, the Hungerford massacre and the Locherbie disaster. The effect was to prevent people during the Hungerford massacre to get clear causing more death and injury and in all cases to stop the publicisation of what was happening. If the phone lines don't work, then updating Internet news sites and contacting the press becomes impossible. This is how the state seeks to control the news in the modern age — using the police which have the most far reaching powers of any in Western Europe.

● In a set back for civil liberties comes news that police are to have regularised their power to bug and burgle people's homes. 'Safeguards' have been set so that favoured groups like solicitors, journalists and doctors will be free of the police's Stasi-like tendencies, but for 99 per cent of the population there is no protection from big brother. Typically, the 'bug and burgle' policy was welcomed by the media journalists (who are protected from this intrusion) and they dwelt on 'drug dealers' as being

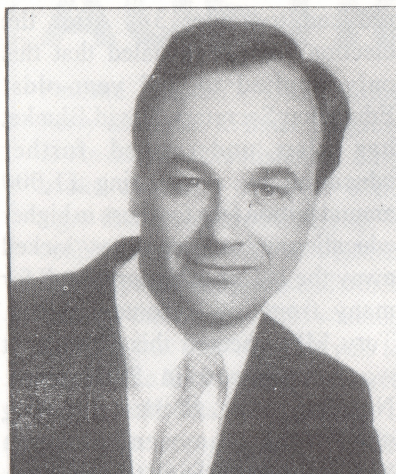

Home Secretary Jack Straw:
Perhaps being bugged by MI5 as a radical student has given him a taste for intrusive state surveillance?

the targets. Not a hint of the potential for stifling peaceful political dissent. After news that MI5 bugged and burgled hundreds of thousands, most of them quite innocent, why should this be any different? Indeed, legitimatising this bug and burgle tyranny only makes it worse.

All the establishment parties appear to be quite happy watching Britain slide towards an elective dictatorship. Only the BNP is advancing the cause of greater freedom in the UK. The BNP is the Freedom Party!

Respectability — The Story Of An 'Ex-Neo-Nazi'

The Sunday Life in Northern Ireland has reported that: 'An ex-neo-Nazi leader who stood for an Ulster seat in the General Election may face

IAN ANDERSON:
Still single and a very nice boy prosecution for failing to return his election expenses on time.'

The story involving National Demoprat leader Ian Anderson dates back to May when he stood in Londonderry East to score just 81 votes. The Sunday Life commented that Oxford drop-out Anderson faced a £5,000 fine and the loss of all electoral rights — including that of the vote — for five years, if the file sent to the Director for Public Prosecutions is used to press charges.

That, of course, may not happen. Anderson has a long history of narrow squeaks: When in the mid 1980s he was pulled over in his car in Newham after shooting a red light at 60mph by police, he was found to be almost incapably drunk. "Falling down drunk" was what Anderson told his drinking buddies. Anderson then had a minor nervous breakdown and fled to his parent's country estate fearing a possible gaol sentence for reckless & dangerous driving and driving under the influence. He was nevertheless mysteriously not prosecuted and he returned from his nervous exile looking fit and well. A short time later he was rebuked by the NF for 'losing' the NF membership list for Newham in suspicious circumstances, but exonerated of actually passing it into the hands of an anti-British hate group into whose hands it fell.

Since then Anderson has pocketed at least one legacy benefiting the NF before splitting that party into two.

More recently Ian (what money?) Anderson, 44, a confirmed bachelor, was seen swapping calling cards with the UKIP's James Feisenberger (another confirmed bachelor) during the count at the Uxbridge by-election. Politics makes for strange bedfellows!

WILL LABOUR END THE RACE ATTACKS?

While William Hague minced around Notting Hill to boost his pro-black/hetero credentials, 'Tory' Blair visited Morpeth school in Bethnal Green. It was supposed to show Labour commitment to education, though without further funding. Many readers will need no reminding that Morpeth school was the school where teenager John Stoner was studying in class when he was stabbed by a gang of Bengalis. This was the catalyst for the BNP's Rights for Whites campaign. Since then the race attacks have continued. Pupils cannot even learn without risking being stabbed, so much for education being Labour's first priority. And that begs another question: When will Labour stop the wave of vicious racial attacks and murders carried out against whites?

It isn't politically correct to say so, but the gay lifestyle is a very harsh one. Promiscuity, depression, substance abuse, alcoholism, illness and suicide attempts are far more common in the gay community. This is not opinion: it is fact.

The life expectancy of a gay man without HIV is a shocking 43 years (with HIV it is 39). These facts we aren't allowed to hear, because they are supposedly 'anti-gay'. Another politically incorrect thing we aren't allowed to hear about is the link between homosexuality and paedophilia. [Not all 'gay' men are paedophiles but,] a gay man is 17 TIMES more likely to be a paedophile than a straight man.

Anne Atkins, The Sun.

A government that is prepared to tolerate open adultery and homosexuality at the highest levels of its administration is hardly likely to be a Government that will do anything to support the traditional family, or to promote public morality, or to protect general standards of taste and decency.

So much I would suggest for Tony Blair's much-vaunted 'strong Christian convictions'.

A. Cadwallender, letters, The Sunday Telegraph.

I was astonished to read John Simpson's article "An antidote to the Kalashnikov's power is overdue". Mr Simpson's main point is the usual one — that the world is a better place when the only people allowed to have guns are also wearing government uniforms. Whenever common people get hold of weapons, anarchy results. This is an inaccuracy so often and comprehensively refuted that it is almost worth being called a lie.

In this country before 1920 there were no controls on the civilian possession of firearms. There was very little armed crime. In modern Switzerland every able-bodied male must keep an 'assault rifle' in his home and train in its use. The market in handguns is almost unregulated. Switzerland has very little armed crime.

Armed men in uniform have killed about a hundred million people this century, many of them women and children. Every despotic government disarms its victims. It oppresses them itself, or it leaves them so incapable of resistance that other criminals can wander among them like a fox through chickens.

On the day of your report 'Religious bias could be outlawed' a caller to Spectrum Radio's Jewish programme declared, in reference to the Jerusalem suicide bombers, that such outrages were the inevitable outcome of Islam: "The Koran is filled with incitements to hatred of Jewish people... No Muslims are to be trusted."

Was this a justifiable expression of anguish and anger, or a 'dangerous incitement to religious hatred' of the kind which the Commission for Racial Equality wishes to have outlawed? Some might say that, if texts exist within the Koran to substantiate the caller's claim, she should be free to communicate that fact and to draw what she believes to be reasonable inferences from it.

Unfortunately, the processes of debate became warped in 1976 when, at Lord Scarman's instigation, the 'Incitement to Racial Hatred' section of the Public Order Act was changed to lift from the Crown the obligation to prove 'intent' to secure a conviction and substitute the obligation to show merely that an incitement was 'intended or likely'.

In a true democracy, all subjects should be open to investigation and public debate.

ENOCH

Seven months after his famous Rivers of Blood speech, Enoch Powell spoke again of a gulf in the nation.

GULF IN THE NATION

"The reaction to that speech revealed a deep and dangerous gulf in the nation, a gulf which I fear is no narrower today than it was then. I do not mean between the indigenous population and the immigrants. On the contrary, over the months and years the pressure upon me to oppose the growth in the number of immigrants has come as much from my immigrant constituents as from the rest, if not more so... Nor do I mean the gulf between those who do, and those who do not, know from personal experience the impact and reality of immigration. Knowledge of the facts and concern about them has been spreading rapidly in parts of the kingdom where a commonwealth immigrant is never seen. I mean the gulf between the overwhelming majority of people throughout the country on one side, and on the other side a tiny minority, with the almost a monopoly hold upon the channels of communication, who seem determined not to know the facts and not to face the realities and who will resort to any device or extremity to blind both themselves and others."

ENOCH POWELL 1968

REPATRIATION FILE

Last year South Africa repatriated 180,713 illegal immigrants. Every week guarded trains run back to Zimbabwe, Mozambique and Malawi. South Africa has 3-8 million illegals all of whom compete for jobs with native South Africans. George Orr, a senior Home Affairs Ministry official said: "Every year more and more come in. They utilise health, education and housing facilities which are in short supply and they often turn to crime."

Last month, a Mozambique man was eaten by lions bringing the number of immigrants eaten by lions and crocodiles this year to at least eleven.

Here in Britain, the plans to reintroduce the grey wolf back into Northumbria are not thought to be linked to deterring illegal immigration.

● Canada is facing a veritable wave of immigration from Czech gypsies. 15,000 plan to migrate and the Canadian embassy is receiving 400 calls per day making enquiries following a programme on Czech TV which showed happy gypsies living the good life in Canada. The gypsy population in the Czech Republic is 300,000.

● Italy has had another boat load of immigrants reach its shores last month. This time more than 400 illegals reached Sicily. As in Britain, meaningless unenforced expulsion orders were issued to the illegals from Bangladesh, Iran and Turkey who can travel to any part of the EU under its new open borders policy. Most of them will be headed for Britain which is well known as Europe's soft touch for benefit packages worth in excess of £260 per week for a couple with children.

South Africa's wildlife does its bit to stave off a flood of immigration

Notting Hill Carnival

● This year's Notting Hill Carnival was described by police as "the quietest ever" with only one murder — a white man battered to death and one (white) man receiving gun shot wounds.

● In the land of Chaucer, London, Keats, Tennyson, Shelley, Wordsworth, Kipling, Elgar, Williams, Turner, Constable, Wren, Gibbons and Shakespeare — illustrious culture creators all, Tory leader William Hague described the Notting Hill Carnival as: "The biggest cultural event of the nation."

● Here, Hague tries hard to convince that: (a) He's not 'gay' and; (b) He likes Blacks. Pull the other one William!

GUNS AND CRIME – THE ADMISSION

After the massive cost and the fuss surrounding gun ownership and the decision to ban guns came the most abject admission of failure when police chiefs along with Home Secretary Straw announced a gun amnesty with a difference. This was a special guns amnesty for a special place — Brixton. Police apparently think that drug dealers, never the holders of legally owned weapons in any case, will hand over their Brownings, Makarovs, sawn-off shotguns, Uzi, Skorpion and Ingram sub-machine guns!

This farcical amnesty, announced before the deadline for the handover of legally held weapons has even been completed, shows exactly what a complete nonsense has been the taking away of legally held weapons. The waste of tax-payers money to buy the guns back, the rescinding of a long-held freedoms to keep firearms

ASIAN WARS

Following on from BN's report in July of the trouble surrounding the Indian film, The Border in which Muslims in Leeds rioted and had to be dispersed by police comes news that 550 people had to be evacuated from a cinema fire in Edgware, London. Police have confirmed that the fire was arson and are keen to talk to two Asian men seen smoking near the seat of the fire!

Communists? Or did they toss them out into the dustbin (the dustbin of history eh?).

I advertised an interesting collection of Communist books for sale in the window of a well known shop in Glasgow's West End. Despite the fact that this area is choc-a-block with well-heeled lefties, I got not one enquirer.

Is it not obvious that Communism is dead? Yet there are still some trying to tell us that mass terror, concentration camps, police brutality, press censorship, tyranny, lies and hypocrisy are all signs of a 'progressive society'. Are they plain daft? Or do they think we are?

Sir,
I am sick of seeing this country slide even further towards the multi-racial cesspit it is becoming.

For too long Britain has been like a sponge, soaking up third world immigration at a hugely underestimated rate — ignoring the rights of the indigenous population and treating them like second class citizens.

In my opinion this sponge has soaked up far too much and I believe that the only party capable of taking it in both hands and wringing it out is the BNP.

L. Jallands,

Sir,
The plans for additional housing in the West Country demonstrate that immigrants are not only competing with our people for space in the towns, but indirectly with those in the country too. The immigrants are not blamed for this of course. Instead we have this ridiculous story about the growth of single person households.

The immigrants must think we British are stupid the way we promote their Sri Lanka health ministry has denied reports of an outbreak of cholera. Russian businessmen and tourists, however, have gone down with the disease which was declared as having been contracted in Sri Lanka. In the Dominican Republic, health officials are struggling to contain an outbreak of typhoid. At least three Britons have caught the disease which is marked at its onset by flu-like symptoms.

UKIP IN DISARRAY

Dr. Alan Sked, the UKIP's leader has resigned following UKIP's disastrous showing in the Uxbridge by-election. Sked, a confirmed bachelor, has returned to his ivory academic tower and turned his back on politics following the loss of promised Goldsmith money (Jimmy died before the promise could be made good), morale-sapping party infighting and the disastrous 39 votes (0.12%) scored in Uxbridge.

GOVERNMENT HEALTH WARNING

The government has signalled its intention to raise the age at which cigarettes can be bought from 16 to 18 thus saving British youngsters from smoking themselves to death. They can instead be bugged to death as the government also plans to reduce the age of homosexual consent from 18 to 16.

The news appears to be out of synch. Recently a news broadcast depicted the success story of Ugandan Asians in this country. Many had settled in Leicester and established clothing manufacturers, employing many fellow Asians.

NEW BNP LEAFLETS

All these children would be alive today if our spineless politicians had the guts to declare war on the paedophiles

The killers of all these children were either known or convicted paedophiles — like dozens of other child-killers. How many more must die before something is done? Only when we lock away the perverts who prey on our children, removing them from society completely, will our streets and playgrounds be safe again. And for paedophiles who kill their victims, the only just punishment is the rope!

MEDIA DYNAMITE!

Two new party leaflets have been drawn up to capture public support using a different style of leaflet to that used in the past. These two new leaflets are 2-sided A4 in one colour and to help promote distribution as much as possible, the party has obtained a special printing deal to keep prices very low!

The issue of paedophilia or child molesters to give them their common name is big news around the country. Sex beasts are being routinely 'outed' and demonstrations are occurring against them. This is the leaflet to set the topic alight and give any BNP branch almost

THEME-PARK BRITAIN

How 'politically correct' townies are killing our country

ANOTHER farmhouse lies derelict, either to fall down or to become a yuppie weekend cottage. Yet another family swallowed up in the city, while more and more farms every year are taken over by city speculators, while village schools, pubs and shops become holiday homes. Rural Britain has been systematically neglected and depopulated by a system based on city values and short-term greed. What has this got to do with Field Sports? Everything!

Our masters in Westminster and the media have forgotten that a healthy countryside is the backbone of a nation. Their only concern is to preserve a few pretty bits as a summer theme park and tourist trap. The idea of a rural Britain which stands on its own feet, which has its own industries, traditions and sports actually frightens our urban masters, because it doesn't need them. They need our taxes, but rural Britain doesn't need the parasites in parliament. Whitehall and the TV studios. But people who don't need their 'help' make these power-junkies uneasy. That's why they love the 'under-privileged, multi-racial inner-cities', and it's why they hate the real people of rural Britain.

That's the real reason for their attack on country sports. Animal welfare doesn't come into it. If it did, they'd do something about the scandal of halal and kosher ritual slaughter, whereby hundreds of thousands of animals every year are slowly bled to death without any pre-stunning, in ways which would land any other slaughterman in prison. But the Labour Party and most 'animal welfare' fanatics turn a blind eye to this 'religious' savagery, just as they ignore the huge numbers of lambs taken by foxes and badgers. After all, cuddly foxes are politically correct, whereas native Britons, and our traditions and livelihoods don't count. We only built this country, we only pay the taxes — so we don't count!

As a matter of fact, the masters of urbanised Britain don't give a damn about foxes either. If they did, they wouldn't be so keen to condemn them to slow death by poison, habitat-destruction and gangrene from bullet wounds (where are they going to find 'marksmen' in a country where they've outlawed target shooting)? What they really care about is destroying our identity, our sense of belonging, our nationhood. To hundreds of thousands of Britons, their sense of identity is inextricably bound up with hunting or other field sports — that's why they're the latest target.

That's also why weather forecasters don't use temperatures which actually mean something any more. That's why you can't buy pre-packed potatoes by the pound any more. That's why the county regiments have been amalgamated out of existence. That's why our kids come home from school knowing more about 'colonial exploitation' in Africa than about our own history. That's why TV soaps portray homosexual perversion as acceptable, even preferable. That's why our cities (because British people there are targets too) have been filled with hideous tower blocks and with strangers from every part of the globe. That's why our political and economic freedoms are being submerged in a European super-state. That's why they won't leave anything alone.

What we are facing is the organised destruction of our identity and freedoms by an out-of-touch but immensely powerful political and media elite. It can only be stopped, let alone reversed, when large numbers of ordinary Britons unite and organise to resist and reverse the process — when we British organise to take back control of our own country. That's the purpose of the British National Party.

guaranteed publicity with the party's strong, yet popular stance of advocating capital punishment for the sex monsters.

The other new A4 leaflet offered is the new Countryside leaflet, looked at in August BN, and which is more appropriate for rural areas since it is aimed at country folk. In this leaflet, the point is made that the country folk are under attack just as are the townies.

The party spells out its policies to regenerate the countryside, provide jobs and maintain the rural way of life.

Both leaflets are price £10 per thousand with postal charges of £6.40/1,000 and £8.55/2,000.

Because of the 'hassle-free' nature of both of these leaflets they are particularly suitable for isolated individuals who wish to leaflet their communities and get the word out where it may never have been heard before.

To assist that, prices on smaller quantities are as follows: £5.00/500 plus £5.15 p&p; £2.50/250 plus £2.50 p&p; £1.00/100 plus 95p p&p.

AUSTRALIA

Pauline Hanson's One Nation Party continues to make progress in Australia. Establishment dirty tricks continue however amid signs that things are hotting up. A couple of months ago, newspaper opinion polls were published which 'proved' her support was waning, showing just 8%. The idea was to employ the herd instinct and have Aussies abandon One Nation. It has since emerged in the media now that the poll was a carefully managed piece of propaganda, with the poll taken in a single inner city area of almost no One Nation support. Since then, more representative polls show support at around 15% — more in One Nation strongholds.

Recently Pauline Hanson's Oxley constituency boundaries have been 'rearranged' by government chiefs to include bigger chunks of territory inhabited by Aborigines. Polls quickly found that her poll rating in Oxley was still 64 per cent!

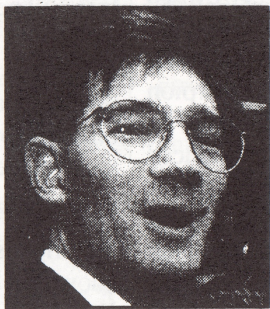

Leftist demonstrators continue to employ violence against One Nation meetings. This tactic seems to be backfiring however, as every riot increases support for Hanson. In an escalation of terror, one of her elected officials has actually been shot. Again, this cowardly act has increased her approval ratings.

Such is Hanson's support that prominent politicians and 'back room boys' from other parties are defecting to One Nation. Dr. Michael Selley a scientist and formerly manager of his own high-tech company defected to One Nation in July. Selley who had been the chief of staff to Science Minister Peter McGauran wants to help One Nation financially and organisationally and to organise a rally in Gippsland, the heart of McGauran's electorate. Selley said that: "The McGaurans are the local lords of the manor", and that his former boss was vulnerable to a strong One Nation candidate. "There is a lot of dissatisfaction down there and if it's handled right, One Nation will draw from that." (An independent candidate won the West Gippsland seat in a recent by-election).

Selley's defection to One Nation comes not long after David Oldfield, a government staffer to Parliamentary Secretary Tony Abbott left for One Nation in May.

A year after it was discovered that the Falashas, black Ethiopian Jews, have had their blood donations routinely poured away for fear of AIDS and which prompted a major riot by the Falashas who have complained of Israeli racism for years, comes news that Sephardi Jews are also being discriminated against by the racist Ashkenazis. Four small graves in Tel Aviv were recently exhumed and found to be empty and which were supposed to have contained the graves of four Yemeni infants. While some have claimed that Ashkenazis sold live infants for adoption, others see the empty graves as a sign that non-

Eighteen months after a court ruling that discrimination against white people is unconstitutional, American institutions are finally treating people on the basis of merit rather than skin colour. The ruling, was delayed for so long by 'liberals' and minorities who sought to overturn the ruling which looks like ending the entrenchment of racism against whites.

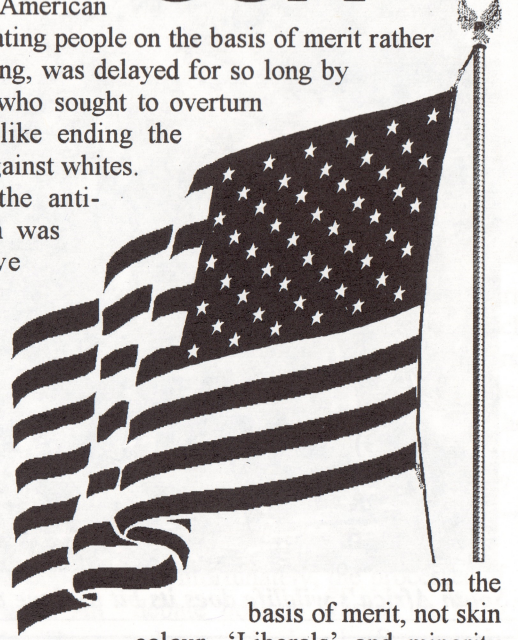

In typical newspeak, the anti-white race discrimination was known as 'affirmative action', which meant that white owned firms could not get government contracts, government hiring practices meant that whites could not find government employment and white students could not gain entry to University when less qualified minorities could do so.

Now that the Supreme Court has ruled that proposition 209 is constitutional (prop 209 outlawed all discriminatory practices in California with implications for the whole country), California is implementing the law and Berkeley University is the first to treat students Ashkenazis are discriminated against even in death and cannot even get buried but are disposed of elsewhere.

The irony is that the Sephardim are the true Jews of the bible — Semites, just as are their blood relatives, the Arabs. The majority of 'Jews' in the world today are not Semitic, that is, Sephardi but Ashkenazi, a Turkic people who inhabited the Caucasus and who converted to Judaism during the Crusades before migrating to Europe. Their treatment of the Sephardim makes Ashkenazi wails of anti-Semitism look a bit rich.

on the basis of merit, not skin colour. 'Liberals' and minority racists are screaming that the law faculty which had 20 blacks enrol last year has only 1 this year and another faculty has none at all. Black and Hispanic enrolments are down and white and East Asian enrolments are up.

Black campaigner Ward Connerly backs the repeal of the discriminatory laws which he said "cheapened" black achievement and promised that the American Civil Liberties Institute would file law suits to enforce the law. Governor Pete Wilson who also campaigned for the abolition of discrimination said: "Affirmative Action' is racial discrimination. That's unfair, whether practiced by one group of Americans of one colour or another. It generates resentment and divisiveness and favours one group at the expense of all others."

BNP STAGES MEETINGS LENGTH AND BREADTH OF BRITAIN

Over the last month John Tyndall and Nick Griffin have been busy making speeches and inspiring others to greater efforts the length and breadth of the country.

BRISTOL

In Bristol, John Tyndall addressed 35 party members and told of the reduction of British power since the last war from world power to pauper state. Mr. Tyndall was preceded by a surprise speaker who had made her way from the Tories via the Referendum Party to the BNP, Mrs. Janet Ashman. Janet told a very interested meeting exactly what it was that brought her to the BNP. The collection raised more than £200 and was a sign of the great spirit in the meeting.

BRADFORD

The new and independent Bradford group held its first big meeting and the audience of 40 heard John Tyndall explain the party's development over the last few months which have been dominated by the General Election and to point the way forward in the process of building the nucleus of a mass party that can ultimately challenge the establishment parties for power. Leeds Organiser Tony McDonnell and North West Regional Organiser Chris Jackson also spoke and gave very encouraging reports of growth and success in their respective areas.

DEWSBURY

Dewsbury branch held another well attended Sunday Club dinner last month and attracted more than fifty people to the event on a strict invitation only basis. Many of the audience were first-timers, having made contact with the party at the last election. In keeping with elsewhere in the country, the calibre of the new supporters is high with businessmen, teachers, housewives, nurses and a solicitor present.

John Tyndall gave an impassioned speech outlining the nationalist vision of a new Britain that won him a standing ovation from the audience present. Earlier, Mr. Frances Taylor made her maiden party address to the good natured crowd and called for the restoration of traditional men and women roles in society, while savaging the idea of 'feminism'.

JOHN TYNDALL SPEAKS IN BRISTOL

After the meeting, there was the usual 'Sunday Club' social and buffet, with new members getting to meet and chat to old hands and vice versa.

NORTH WEST RALLY

The North West Region of the BNP had its best meeting for many years when party leader John Tyndall visited the Rossendale area to speak on August 30th. About 55 were in attendance, all of them from within the region itself.

Under the chairmanship of Andrew Weardon, the meeting began with a speech from Peter Rushton on the use by the party of the Internet, for which he is responsible for its recently established North West site.

He was followed by Roger Wood, BNP candidate for Morley & Rothwell in the general election, who gave a short but excellent speech on the subject of white survival.

Mr. Tyndall dwelt in his speech on the Millennium Dome, which he described as a political extravaganza that perfectly symbolised postwar Britain and the nation's governments of that period: celebrating when there is nothing to celebrate; bread and circuses to distract the nation from its real problems; the contract to build going to a foreign company because British industry is to decrepit to do the job; further uglification of the urban landscape; and government decisions made in contempt of public opinion, which by a majority of 10-1 is against the waste.

An excellent collection raised over £200 and a raffle over £30 in addition to this. At the halfway interval a well-organised buffet was enjoyed by all.

GLASGOW

John Tyndall followed up his appearance in Lancashire by a visit to Glasgow the following day. In his speech before an audience of around 45 people he condemned the confidence trick of 'devolution', which was just part of a concentrated attack on the unity of the United Kingdom, of which the war against Northern Ireland was another part. He attacked the message in the film Braveheart, which appealed to a misconceived 'nationalism' as a trick to set the Scots against the English. Far better to kindle Scottish pride, he said, by making pictures about the glorious deeds of Scottish regiments in the British Army and the disproportionately great role of Scots in building the British Empire. The so-called 'Scottish National Party', he said, was a fraud — talking of 'independence' while it was ready to sell Scotland out to the European Union and going on about a distinct 'Scottish identity' while speaking in the next breath of its ideal of a multi-racial Scotland.

He was preceded by another guest speaker, Leeds Organiser Tony McDonnell, who gave a heartening report of dramatic BNP progress in Yorkshire. The meeting was chaired by Scottish Regional Organiser Scott McLean.

The collection topped £160.

NEWHAM

Nick Griffin was the speaker at the Newham meeting fresh from his court appearance for daring to say that Britain needs more white children! The sick minds behind the Race Relations Act will not have been pleased to know that Nick organised a whole series of speaking engagements based upon his court appearance.

Newcomers at the meeting were visibly shocked to discover the true nature of Britain's totalitarian Race laws as Nick outlined his run in with state repression. Later, Nick gave a comprehensive overview of modern Britain which was well received by everyone present.

WOKING

The following day, Wednesday August 6th, Nick spoke for an hour and a half to more than forty people and made the main point that the 'good times' of economic prosperity are drawing to a close. Economic globalisation means employers chasing the cheapest labour for the biggest profit. "For these people, British jobs are expendable" he said.

An excellent collection and literature sales raised more than £150 and Branch Organiser Paul Henderson revealed that election enquiries make a new group in Egham a real possibility.

CROYDON

Paul Ballard, a fellow defendant in the Race case against Nick Griffin hosted an enjoyable social evening which was interspersed by a short but lively speech from Mr. Griffin. He said, of his and Paul's case, that repression was characteristic of regimes which are losing their grip. As good quality real British ale flowed, members renewed old acquaintances including two former NF members who had not been politically active for several years.

BRANCH AND GROUP REVIEW

At the start of every year, BNP Chairman John Tyndall in conjunction with National Organiser Richard Edmonds reviews the progress (or lack of it) of each branch and group of the party and branch or group certificates are presented to the various unit Organisers. Regional Organisers are invariably consulted in this process.

This year because of the General Election, the 1997 review has been delayed. Several groups have been agitating for the process to be completed quickly since branch status beckons!

The review will be completed soon. Please be patient!

If you want to make contact with any of these units write to the address given. Where no address is present or if you want details to start a new unit, please write to:- BNP Head Office c/o PO Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW.

BNP TO CONTEST EURO ELECTIONS!

Party leader John Tyndall announced that the British National Party would contest the next elections to the European Parliament in 1999.

The decision which marks a reversal of previous practice comes after the full benefits of the party grabbing a party political broadcast at the General Election and having millions of leaflets delivered by the Post Office have become apparant.

Previously, the party refrained from fighting for seats in Europe on the grounds that voters disillusioned with Europe probably wouldn't turn out to vote.

The BNP is to fight a minimum of TWENTY Euro seats at the next Euro elections to make the party's biggest electoral showing ever.

Euro seats typically incorporate eight parliamentary seats and so the party will be contesting the equivalent of 160 seats at a General Election – almost a three-fold increase on May.

The problems of contesting more than twenty Euro seats are different from the General Election in May. Four months ago the party stood in 56 seats. Fifty-six candidates had to be found and election agents had to complete paper work for all 56 candidates. In 1999, the amount of work done by election agents and the number of candidates needed will be cut by around two-thirds.

But while the amount of work and manpower needed will be reduced, the amount of money needed for the elections will increase. This is primarily because, in order to take advantage of free postal delivery of our candidate's election addresses, the election addresses will obviously have to be printed up and paid for. In the General Election, the BNP put out some 2¼ million leaflets. At the European Elections, the party will be putting out some 6-7 million leaflets, tripling the printing bill.

Regions will be able to contest traditional areas, or to cast the recruiting net far out into the shires to reach people who will never have had a BNP leaflet before. Or even to do both! Great swathes of territory are waiting to be covered in this, the most massive recruiting exercise yet.

Another bonus is that the election will almost certainly be held under proportional representation under a regional list system and this will be certain to boost the party's vote.

The printing bill for this election will be big and the party will have to make a big effort to fund it. One of the main reasons why the announcement has been made now is to give BNP branches and groups time to raise the necessary money. The time to start is now!

BNP MAKES SPLASH AT LOYALIST PARADE

Glasgow BNP attended a loyalist parade through the streets of the city back in July just too late to be reported in last month's BN. As hundreds of loyalists marched their support for our kinsfolk in Ulster, Glasgow BNP demonstrated its support too with a dozen activists handing out 600 leaflets and selling nearly 300 copies of British Nationalist!

The BNP members were well received throughout the day as loyalists in Scotland and Ulster grow more and more aware of the wider threat to our British sense of identity. By common consent, the day was judged a good day out and seeing the friendly reception, a morale boosting one at that!

BNP STAGES MEETINGS LENGTH AND BREADTH OF BRITAIN

REDBRIDGE

In Ilford, Nick Griffin spoke to nearly fifty members and supporters, many of whom were attending their first meeting. As elsewhere, the calibre of the people present was high and four willing new volunteers were signed up on the spot! Two keen lads took away quantities of British Nationalist to sell and distribute amongst friends, family and work colleagues.

Nick held up a picture of a Viking Princess and told how he faced prison for publishing the picture described by enemy of free speech Alex Carlile as "A powerful racist image." Nick asked the audience: "What future for your Prince or Princess — your son or daughter, grandson or granddaughter?"

Regional Organiser Tony Lecomber spoke before Nick and he detailed the strides made at the election and the potential for the party to repeat the success of the

NICK GRIFFIN

General Election at the Euro-Elections in 1999.

The meeting ended very enthusiastically, reflected in a collection & literature sales of £230.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM

Nick Griffin's last speaking engagement last month was at the first meeting of South Birmingham group BNP which had fought its first election only a month before. A small but enthusiastic audience of fifteen heard Nick stress how everything the party did was geared to the 14 words: "We must secure the existence of our race and a future for white children."

Dr. Mark Deavin also spoke and described the de-industrialisation of Britain. Himself a Brummie, Mark remarked how the 'Black country' was so-called because of the soot which hung over all as a result of the tremendous industry in the area. Now, the term 'Black country' meant something quite different!

The meeting raised £60 with a keenness to continue with the good progress already made by the group over the last couple of months.

What we stand for

- The establishment of a government of national unity that will put an end to nationally divisive party warfare; the return of leadership and statesmanship to British affairs.
- An end to immigration and a start to repatriation.
- British withdrawal from the European Community: trade with Europe where it suits us but no political ties.
- The disbanding of the multi-racial Commonwealth and its replacement by a new Commonwealth of self-governing white states.
- British ownership and control of British industry and resources.
- Protection of British industry by the selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.
- An end to the financial swindle that causes inflation and slump, and its replacement by a sane and fair financial system that will give the people the purchasing power to buy the goods they produce.
- The subordination of the power of the City to the power of Government, and the harnessing of the City to the needs of British industry.
- The regeneration of British farming, with the object of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food; also the restoration of the fishing industry by protection of our traditional fishing grounds.
- A healthy environment for a healthy people — the protection of our countryside and an end to the architectural disfigurement of our towns and cities.
- Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty.
- A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and the sacking of 'trendy' teachers.
- An alternative defence strategy: withdrawal from NATO; closure of all foreign military and air bases in Britain; British withdrawal from the war in former Yugoslavia, where no British interest is at stake; the bringing home of British forces from Germany; the strengthening of Britain's defences and a position of armed neutrality.
- An end to overseas aid and the allocation of the money saved to the financing of repatriation and greater help for the needy at home.
- The crushing of the IRA, the termination of the Anglo-Irish agreement and firm support for the loyalist majority in Northern Ireland.
- A return to healthy moral values aimed at strengthening the family and community.
